Additions and Alterations to the Instructions for Authors

A Short Communication is not as long as, but adequate and fully comparable with articles "in extenso". The advantage of a Short Communication is that it can usually be included in print sooner than extensive articles. The text range is between 2000 and 5000 characters incl. spaces. Up to 3 references are acceptable. Information is reviewed for publication and indexed in the same way as articles "in extenso". The text can be in Czech / Slovak, or English, and must be accompanied by two full Abstracts, equal to articles "in extenso".

A Preliminary Note is a variant of the Short Communication and serves for the rapid publication of interim results of scientific research. A requirement for publication is that the results will be provided in full scale "in extenso" immediately after completion of the research. For this reason, a Preliminary Note (Preliminary Communication) is not indexed. The range is about 3000 characters. In exceptional cases, it is possible to include a brief Table simplifying the understanding of the interim results achieved. No quotes or images are included. The text must be accompanied by two short Abstracts of up to 500 characters.

A Letter to the Editor means exclusively and only readers' written responses to articles published in the Forensic Medicine (Soudní lékařství). These include both consistent, in support of an article's conclusion, as well as critical polemical conclusions. For this reason, the Editorial Board will not accept a Letter to the Editor later than one month after the dispatch of a journal. A letter reflects only the writer's view and Editor does not alter the text, nor is it reviewed, edited, abbreviated or added to. The response of the author of the article, with whose conclusions the Letter to the Editor is in dispute, is expected in the shortest possible time. The text range of a Letter to the Editor cannot exceed 2000 characters. Letter to the Editor correspondence is not indexed. The number of authors of a Letter to the Editor may not exceed 3.

Abstracts: Each manuscript must be accompanied by two summaries - the Short Summary of max. 500 characters including spaces, and the Long Summary ranging between 1400 and 1600 characters incl. spaces. If the work is in English, the short English summary as well as the long summary in Czech / Slovak must be included. In justified cases, the Editorial can provide a translation into Czech (the fee is 50-100 €).
